Here is the story that was told to me Private Bryant as he lay wounded in the hospital ship:

in the morning, however, the Colonel gave orders to saddle. We jumped on our horses, and at the same moment shells began to burst overhead. Our horses stampeded. The enemy's sharpshooters were already in position, and while we were recapturing our horses shrapnel, canister shots and bullets were Something had to be done, so we got the Maxims up, despite the withering fire. Our boys soon got busy. It would have done you good to see how calmly and quietly they went about their work "Our men realized the meaning of their job. It was to hold on until the artillery came up. In other words, it was to save the regiment from annihilation. Within a few minutes they were sending some 8000 shots in so many seconds among the Germans.

"Then the artillery arrived. We had four guns against 11 for the Germans, but some of those 11 were silenced. "It was not long before the Bays were itching to charge. Almost before they expected it the bugle sounded and they were off, 'hell for leather,' at the enemy's

He lived for five days on bread and water, all that the Germans would supply him. Gaston Bossier, a private in the Sixth Culrassiers, who is known in civil life as Darino, a lyric artist at the Comedie Francaise and a favorite of the Parisi-rancase and a involte of the Parisi-canes, tells the following story, which seems almost an eclipse of the blowing up of the Delhi Gates.

Bossier, lying wounded in Normany, with gestures, but falls back groaning: by shrapnel, tells the story in true Gallic manner. He tries to rise and illustrate with gestures, but falls back groaning. "We were together, the Cuiraissiers of France and the English Royal Engineers as we retreated across the Aisne at Soissons. The Germans advanced rapidly, trying to rush masses of soldiers across.

Bridge after bridge had to be blown up. The German sharpshooters were fring at us from a clump of trees and the mitrallicuses were working havoc among the allies.

"Suddenly a party of English engineers residently a party of English engineers rushed toward the bridge. They lost heavily, but succeeded in landing powder sufficient to destroy it. Before they could light it all of them were killed. We waited while another party of your brave engineers creat near the bridge. They took neers crept near the bridge. They took cover, but the Germans got their range and continued a deadly fire.

ENGINEERS OFFER UP LIVES. "Then we Frenchmen watched what we must remember to our dying day. One engineer suddenly dashed at one of the fuses. He was killed before half way there. A second followed and fell almost upon the body of his comrade. A third, fourth and fifth ran in the gauntlet of ess German fire and met the same death. In the same way each followed his comrades until 11 had been killed.

"The German fire seemed to slacken for an instant, and in that time the bridge was blown up, for the 12th man, dashing across the space lined with the bodies of the of his friends, reached the fuse and lighted it. The bridge exploded with a toar as the engineer fell before the German rifle shots."

Rossier was a prisoner of the Germans for some time, but was rescued by the English. He told me shocking details of German crucities which he personally winessed. He himself, although wounded in the leg, was dragged on his kneet in the leg, was dragged on his knees with his hands tied behind him while a lancer thrust his tance against his back. Delivers of transport warms often scancer thrust his lance against his back. Drivers of transport wagons often out at him with their whips as he passed. He was thrown into a cellar at Neufstateau and was almost starved when he heard and was almost starved when he beard fighting on the streets and voices speaking English. He was just atrong chough to call "Au secours" and was rescied.

"I certainly should not accept the sword "I certainly should not accept the sword of honor that you and other well-meaning patriots think of aving me," he said. "Such a recompense must be reserved for the man who shall lead our victorious armies beyond Mets and Strassburg, beyond the Rhine, into the very heart of beyond the Rhine, into the very neart of the German Empire. As for me, modest worker in times of peace, enemy to pub-licity and popularity, it is sufficient that-I have the confidence of those who have served under my orders, and the suffrages of good people such as you."

HAVRE, France, Sept. 17.—It is probable that the details of the wonderful and staring endurance of the troops of the given water by a dauntless lad, Emile Despres, who thereupon was also condemned to immediate execution. Just as the soldiers were bandaging the boy's eyes preparatory to firing the German captain, with a cruel smile, cried cynically, "I give you life on condition that you act as executioner of this sergeant. He asked for water, you'll give him lead." After a moment's hesitation the boy agreed to the horses of his constant. agreed, to the horror of his comrades. Seizing a rifle, he aimed at the sergeant's broast. Then, suddenly turning, he blew a hole through the sneering German. He was backed to pieces with bayonets. La Presze publishes an interview with the private soldier Turcot, who with his comrade, Broussard, captured the first German flag. He is now in the hospital at Mortargis, slightly wounded in the back by a spent bullet. Turcot tells a very modest story. He says he lost his regiment wandering in a wood, when he saw a wounded German standard bearer trying to bide his flag. Calling a comrade, Turcot attacked the German seized the flag. Then came the hardest part, the withdrawal carrying the trophy amidst a storm of bullets. His knapsack was pierced ten times and his rifle broken is his hand.

Chateau de Casteau and Lobbes, a par-ticularly desolated neighborhood, from whence the inhabitants had fled the Germans found a hungry canary in an abandoned farmhouse. Without having experienced the genuine, almost womanly, tenderness of the German soldiers, one would have called their feeding of the canary an affectation, or at best a passing whim, but it was typical.

A story has reached Paris of the courageous action of Mmc. Macherez, of Soissons. When the Germans arrived there they demanded to see the Mayor, who was absent. None of the officials responded to the call, whereupon Mme. Macherez went to the Germans and said: "There is no Mayor here, but I answer for every one and everything—as you will have to do if depredations are com-mitted."

After disputing the requisitions and the conditions of the Germans, the courageous woman saved Soissons on easy

ANTWERP, Sept. 17.

The French papers are recalling an interesting reply which General Paul made a yeaf ago, when his admirers proposed to prement him a sword of honor upon the coerasion of his giving up command of the 20th Army Comman. putting it under his arm he raced through the village street as though attempting a try in Rugby football, a number of Germans following at his beels. After sprinting a quarter of a mile he left his pursuers behind, and later he rejoined his regiment with the flag. Some days previously he wrote to a sportsman friend: 'This is hell. We are lying in trenches under the German artillery fire, but are not allowed to reply. This is the only time I find to write my cor-

"My Dear Parents-If you receive this letter it will be because I have been killed, but don't weep for me, since my fate will have been the noblest a Frenchman can dream of, to die for his country on the eve of victory. We shall be the victors because we have right and confidence on our side. I shall have done my duty to the end, and I hope my death will have been useful to my country. My last thoughts will be for you."

With this letter there came another from the cure of a little Belgian village giving the details of the death of the
